

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

It is written in a very satisfactory manner, citations being used only where necessary and then not at great length, but the leading cases are discussed so that one after reading is conversant with the law without being confused by many exceptions. It is a work which should be procured by every practitioner having any work involving the law of eminent domain.

H. J. C.

Law of Persons and Domestic Relations. By Walter C. Tiffany. 2nd ed. West Publishing Co., St. Paul. 1909. pp. 656.

The contents of the second edition of this work are very similar to those of the first edition, which was issued some thirteen years ago. Since then some of the subjects discussed have attained greater importance, both on account of the intrinsic nature of the subject and the varied judicial decisions bearing upon them, the most notable, of course, being the law of married women.

This edition has elaborated the subject bringing the law to date as far as compilation in a text-book can. The latest cases are discussed with special emphasis upon the subject of divorce, a section being added dealing with its extra-territorial effect, and the property rights of married women are discussed at length.

The remaining subjects follow closely the first edition, being supplemented with many late citations.

Those who have not seen the first edition would do well to procure this volume, and those having the first volume will find a more comprehensive discussion in this work.

H. J. C.